

Senior, Junior and Open Polo Championships of America to Be Held Next September at Philadelphia Country Club

NATIONAL POLO FOR PHILADELPHIA C. C.

Association Awards All Title Tournaments to Club, at Bala.

MANY TOURNEYS LISTED Preparations Completed for International Cup Matches in England.

By SAMUEL J. BROOKMAN.

Philadelphia Country Club will be the scene of the annual senior, junior and open polo championships of America this year. Following a brief consideration of the two bids for the title tournament, one from the Quaker club and the other from the Rockaway Hunting Club, the delegates of the Polo Association in their annual meeting at the Downtown Club yesterday decided in favor of Philadelphia. The award was not unexpected, for the title events were held at Meadow Brook, Long Island, last season, and it was logical to expect a shift in the scene of the championships. There were other considerations, however, that prompted the association to vote in favor of Philadelphia Country Club. Foremost was the knowledge that perhaps the most successful title tournaments yet held were conducted by the Philadelphia Country Club in 1919. On that occasion some of the matches attracted record crowds of 10,000 or more, the grounds at Bala being very accessible to the Philadelphia public, the admission charges very reasonable, and the facilities for handling a large gathering all that could be desired. Philadelphia Country Club, figuring correctly on the growing public interest in the sport, enlarged the seating capacity of its stands threefold before the 1919 championships and was gratified to find them comfortably filled on the days of the important matches. In short, both from a competitive and a financial standpoint, the tournament was a pronounced success.

The championships are to be held as usual at the fall end of the open competitive season and fourteen days have been set aside for their completion, September 12 to 26, which means that the American International tournament which is to be held at Bala in the North and middle West from May to September. The new addition to the list of polo fixtures is the tournament of the Sand Hills Polo Club, to be held at Princeton, N. J., from May 15 to 16. In the local district the leading events will be the Meadow Brook tournament, from June 15 to 16, and the Rockaway Hunting Club, from July 4 to 15.

Long Tournament List.

Twenty-three other open tournaments, covering a period from January 29 to September 19, were approved yesterday by the delegates. They include competitions on the Pacific coast during the winter months, tournaments in the South during the spring, and in the North and middle West from May to September. The new addition to the list of polo fixtures is the tournament of the Sand Hills Polo Club, to be held at Princeton, N. J., from May 15 to 16. In the local district the leading events will be the Meadow Brook tournament, from June 15 to 16, and the Rockaway Hunting Club, from July 4 to 15. Reporting on the preparations for the matches at Hurlingham the international committee for the first time officially announced the selection of the teams. The American players will be in England by the first of April prepared to start practice immediately. The selection of the teams was made by the committee, which has been sent to Richard P. Remor, former two-mile national champion; John R. Pearson, former champion of the New York stars, as well as William Platt, the former champion of the Philadelphia team; and Thomas A. MacFarlane, former champion of the Philadelphia team.

John C. Groome President.

In the absence of H. L. Herbert, chairman of the Polo Association, who is away on his vacation, William A. Hazard, the secretary-treasurer, was to have presided, but a bad cold prevented him from attending, and Col. John C. Groome of Philadelphia took his place as acting chairman. W. Strohman Jones of New York acted as secretary. Mr. Herbert and Mr. Hazard were re-elected president and secretary-treasurer respectively, and so were the following members of the executive committee: Carlisle P. Burke, President; J. Cheever Cowdin, W. Cameron Forbes, John C. Groome, William A. Hazard, Col. John R. Lindsey, Devereux Milburn, Dudley P. Rogers, W. Plunkett Stewart, Louis E. Stoddard, Robert E. Strawbridge, H. E. Talbot, Jr., and Harry Payne Whitney.

CANADA PROPOSES TENNIS CHALLENGE

Official Letter Indicates Bid for Davis Cup.

A letter read at a meeting of the Davis Cup committee of the United States Lawn Tennis Association yesterday indicates that a tennis challenge for the international trophy may be expected soon from Canada. In the communication E. H. Senior, secretary of the Canadian association writes: "Our association proposes holding a meeting, probably next month, when the question of entering a team will be decided definitely. Personally, I think there is every likelihood of our team entering, and it would be most convenient and satisfactory to us if the preliminary ties could be played in the United States."

The committee will recommend to the annual meeting of the association that authority to enter the preliminary matches be granted to the Davis Cup committee, this having been the practice in other seasons.

ST. FRANCIS FIVE WINS.

St. Francis College added another victory to its long string when it defeated Albany Law School yesterday, 20 to 25. Albany was originally scheduled to play St. John's, but St. John's cancelled the game and St. Francis filled the engagement on short notice. The game was nip and tuck for the first half, ending with the score 12-12.

EBY WILL COMPETE AGAIN.

Earl Eby, perhaps the greatest half miler in the country to-day, and who recently announced that he had left college to enter the business world, will again compete for the University of Pennsylvania on the cinder path during the coming season. Eby's change of plans was revealed last night in the course of a conversation with the young athlete.

YALE SQUASH TEAM RETAINS ITS LEAD Scores Eighth Straight Victory at Expense of Princeton Club.

Yale Club continues to show the way in the class B metropolitan squash tennis championship. On their home courts yesterday the Eli graduates scored their eighth straight victory of the season at the expense of the Princeton team, winning five of the seven matches contested. In the two matches that went to Princeton Club's credit extra games were necessary for victory. They were won by Harold Rowe and Leonard Beckman. The latter who is better known as a lawn tennis player, showed the best form he has exhibited since taking to squash tennis. ## HIGH LIGHTS AND SHADOWS IN ALL SPHERES OF SPORT

By DANIEL.

Copyright, 1921, by The New York Herald.

DAVEY BANCROFT has signed his 1921 contract with the Giants, and no matter what trades the Giants may make Bancroft is going to keep his place at shortstop. There isn't another shortstop in the National League who could displace Davy, and that goes for the $150,000 Walter Maranville. After he joined the Giants last July Bancroft, who alighted in the game, jumped ready had a reputation as one of the greatest infielders in the game, jumped to the fore as the most sensational shortstop. His work was a leading factor in the rise of the Giants from the ruck. He not only fielded in remarkable style, but he batted well, too. For a spell he was among the five leading batters of the league, and at the close of the season he had an average of .299. It was his best batting season in his professional baseball career, and his average was twenty-two points better than his best as a minor leaguer. In the minors his top mark was .277, made with Portland in 1914, the year before he joined the Phillies.

In hitting Bancroft last season was outranked by only one other shortstop in the league—Charley Hollocher of the Cubs, who was out a good part of the season after an operation for appendicitis. Hollocher's average was .319. Then came Bancroft with his .299, Dr. Lavan of the Cardinals with .289, Artie Fletcher of the Phillies with .284, Barbare of the Pirates with .274 and Maranville of the Braves with .266. Olson of the Dodgers batted .254, Kopf of the Reds .245 and Catton of the Pirates was at the bottom of the list with .236. The Giants were mighty fortunate in getting Bancroft, and let it be said that his being first to send in his 1921 contract is part appreciation for the New York move which rescued him from the dreary cellar of major league baseball.

Kilbane Seems Safe, but He Must Fight. We do not know just how far Johnny Kilbane has gone back in the last year, but we venture that he will have to retrogress probably twice as much before he will worry over a meeting with any of the so-called contenders for the featherweight championship. Though he will be thirty-two in April and has been out of training for a long while, Kilbane seems to be almost as firmly entrenched in his championship as Leonard in the lightweight supremacy. We reached that conclusion on Monday night when we saw Andy Chaney outpoint Charley Beecher in fifteen rounds.

Chaney used a fairly effective right for the body, but Beecher left himself open for that blow. As for Beecher, who never was in danger and wasn't beaten by so very much, he had a pretty fast left, but it had about as much sting as a June zephyr. Chaney was a "sucker" for that jab, but it never hurt him, so he kept bying in with his attack for the body. Beecher would not have a ghost of a chance with Kilbane, but Chaney might make some little trouble with his body blows. We doubt it.

At any rate, it is high time that the champion came out of his shell and either defended the title against such opposition as the boxing world may be able to send against him or resign and leave the title open for an elimination series. The question involved is not whether we have anybody who can beat Kilbane, but whether we really have a champion of the featherweight division.

Penn Five Seems To Be Favorite Again.

Affairs in the Intercollegiate Basketball League are so scrambled that it is hard to say just which five should be regarded as the favorite. Cornell seemed to present a strong claim to the title after victories over Princeton and Yale, but along came Dartmouth, supposedly the weakest member of the association, and defeated the Ithacans last Saturday. Princeton, which started with fine prospects, has been beaten by close scores by Cornell and Columbia, but it may come back strong. Pennsylvania, which defeated Columbia on Saturday, must be conceded a good chance to retain the title which it won last year and solidified with victories over Chicago. Yale is not a serious contender.

New York University, fresh from triumph over the Army and Union, seems to be the strongest five outside of the league, and may be the strongest team in the East. City College, with the greatest passing team in the country, keeps falling short of victory because of the physical handicaps of its men. They are too small to cope with the heavy players of the bigger fives. Harvard, which has come back to the game after being out for a decade, seems to have only a fair team.

Plenty of Crabs in Gravelled Bay. Capt. George Anderson of Gravelled Bay was in town yesterday and he said he had discontinued fishing for this season and hauled out his boat. He said he was over-hauling and would be ready for the early spring flounder run and for the line at the light in April. The boats moored in the bay were covered with ice yesterday morning when he left, but this did not stop the crab dredger that he worked from the ship channel out to Fort Hamilton and from there over to Sea Gate, back and forward.

There are plenty of crabs in the bay, and the Captain, and one boat came ashore a day or two ago with 12,000 crabs for the day's haul. Lobster fishermen are still at work in the deeper channels and are meeting with success. The outside fishing boats operating from Gravelled Bay have all discontinued for the season.

Use of Airplanes in Locating Schools of Fish. The possibility of practical use of the airplane in the locating of schools of fish is one of the most interesting developments in the history of the fishery. The use of the airplane may be in the offshore fisheries in determining the location of schools of fish, and in the case of the mackerel and menhaden, and in promptly communicating the location of schools of fish to the fishing fleet.

In April, 1920, it was suggested to menhaden companies operating in the Chesapeake Bay region and having vessels that frequent the grounds of the Virginia Capes that they might use the airplane to locate schools of fish. The use of the airplane in the offshore fisheries is a new development, and it is one that may be of great importance in the future.

If this experiment continues to meet with success, it may be of great importance in the future. The use of the airplane in the offshore fisheries is a new development, and it is one that may be of great importance in the future.
